FINE KANSAS RANCH

Mr. Rockefeller's Ranch in Kiowa County Described.

IS LIKE A PARADISE

Of Earth With Its Beautiful Equipments.

There are ranches of every kind in the West, some covering counties, other townships. The one owned by Frank Rockefeller, of Cleveland, O., may be expected in acreage, and for equipment it is about the finest thing one cares to feast his eyes upon. Not a detail to make it an earthly paradise in the country home is lacking. It is a place one would least expect to find in the famous short grass country, notable for its reported droughts and grasshoppers but which, as a matter of fact, has come to be the ranchman's paradise.

The Rockefeller ranch is the home of fine blooded cattle and the purpose of the owner is to raise countless herds of swaying steers, but rather well bred cattle. The wild life of the cow puncher in the roundup is nowhere visible on this ideal stretch of grassy plain, which composes the 14,000-acre ranch of Soldier Creek park.

Frank Rockefeller came to Kansas first in 1884, and ever since then he has been in the cattle breeding business in a small way. Each year finds a better class of stock surrounding the ranch, until it has come to be recognized as a center of fine stock. Mr. Rockefeller was last December elected president of the Hereford Breeders' association and not a little of his time is spent in elevating the place of premier cattle.

"The happiest moments of my life are spent in this ranch out here in Kansas," he said recently. "When I first visited the place I believed it to be the best state in the Union at a not far distant time, and now that day is almost at hand. In no manner whatever is it far behind the other states, and in many respects it is ahead. I have always loved stock. As long as I can remember I have been a lover of all animal nature. I have bred chickens, rabbits and pigeons, taking a great delight in it. I bred bantams to make them as small as possible. Thus, I grew from breeding chickens to Short-horns and Herefords to trotting horses."

So it was a desire to fulfill a youthful ambition that brought Mr. Rockefeller to the plains of Kansas twenty-five years ago, and when he purchased the 14,000-acre ranch in Kiowa county he at once began to fix it up to represent the ideal type of a country home. The ranch is ideally situated as to natural advantages in the southwest corner of Kiowa county, on the Englewood branch of the Santa Fe railway. It includes the land on both sides of Soldier Creek, a small and pretty stream that empties into Medicine Creek at the south end of the ranch. Soldier Creek flows across the Rockefeller ranch in a beautiful and picturesque zig-zag manner. The water is not deep, but it is clear and swift. The surface of the land is not painfully level, but knolls break the evenness, here and there being a high bluff at the foot of which plays the sparkling water of Soldier creek. The beauty of the ranch cannot be surpassed anywhere in the west except in the Rocky mountains or the canyons of Arizona.

Mr. Rockefeller and his family spend some time on the ranch every summer, far away from the heat of grimy city life; therefore he has taken pains to make the improvements the best. He has a large modern house, modern in every particular, surrounded by lawns for his servants and barns for his stock. His house is heated by steam, lighted by gas and piped for hot and cold water. Back of the house arises a large bluff, upon the top of which is built a water tank. This furnishes water power to the house and all other buildings on the premises. Mr. Rockefeller's house is surrounded by a big stone wall, on which are a tennis court and other playgrounds, which are in constant use by the family and their guests in the summer months. Mr. Rockefeller has erected at considerable expense two galvanneal iron barns for his stock. On the Rockefeller ranch is raised all the necessary grain to feed his stock. There are 2,000 acres under cultivation, 500 acres being in alfalfa, the rest in corn, sorghum and other crops. He has a large herd of cattle, and a large number of horses. He has a large number of horses, and a large number of horses. He has a large number of horses, and a large number of horses.
